DIY: easter eggs for the window from vellum paper

Instructions No. 3313

Difficulty: Beginner

Working time: 45 Minutes

Even if it's still cold outside - Easter is just around the corner. So it's high time to get some colorful vellum paper and make pretty window pictures with the little ones. The colorful easter eggs from vellum paper bring cheerfulness into the house and are not only only fun to make, but also to admire. The best thing is that the little ones are very proud of their simple works of art, which are created without much effort or patience.

Step-by-step instructions for colorful Easter egg window pictures

Paper snip:

This step is great fun for the little ones. Grab the vellum paper and tear it into lots of little snippets. You don't have to pay attention to even or straight shapes. Let your creativity run wild and tear the pieces of paper into different sizes.

lamp foil stick on:

Now generously coat the lamp foil with glue. A brush or sponge will help. Don't skimp on the glue. Now the little ones can spread the snippets in a criss-cross pattern and press them down lightly. If desired, you can apply several layers on top of each other, then simply apply more glue. Make sure that the entire surface of the foil is covered.

Leave the artwork to dry for one to two hours.

Cut out the eggs and hang them up:

You will need a stencil in the shape of an egg to turn the colorful lamp foil into enchanting pendants. Draw it on cardboard and transfer it to the dried foil. Cut out the eggs. Depending on your children's skills with scissors, you can help them with this. Finally, attach a hanging loop to the eggs: Carefully pull a thread through the foil with a sewing needle to create individual window pictures. Find a nice spot and decorate your window with these original works of art.

Alternative tip:

If the eggs are not to be used as a window picture, they can also be designed as creative Easter invitation cards or greetings cards.
